Proven claims experience

Profile

Financier/mortgagee,
16 staff, $4,100,000 turnover

Background:

The insured was alleged to have made misleading and deceptive representations contained within their product disclosure statement to the claimant outlining that they had experience in valuing properties similar to security property, held adequate insurance and that the loss value ratio (LVR) would not exceed 60% of the valuation made.

Subsequent investigations revealed that whilst the insured could not be held liable, there was no evidence to support that they indeed had the requisite experience. There were also inconsistencies found with the LVR deviating between 60-66.67%.

The claimant sought damages of $1,171,000.

Response:

The policy was triggered and cover was provided for the insured's loss.

Payment:

$350,000 and $117,500 for defence costs.

Profile

Funds manager, 3 staff, $1,900,000 turnover

Background:

The insured specialised in attracting foreign nationals to invest in Australian property-related funds to enhance their visa prospects. The claimant invested $4.5m in the property fund allegedly on the basis that at the time the Insured knew the property was valued at $13m.

Following the investment, the insured made a loan of $17m to a property developer. The claimant was allegedly told that if the property developer defaulted on the loan, the claimant would have first rights to the subject property. The property developer borrowed further money from a separate lender which included a mortgage over the property. The property developer defaulted on the loan and the property was repossessed by the finance company.

The claimant sued for its loss of investment and associated losses.

Response:

The policy was triggered and cover was provided for the insured.

Payment:

$1,500,000 and $350,000 for defence costs.
